

Back office unit

Mumbai : Fidelity Investments has dropped plans to sell its technology back-office unit in India because of long-term benefits it offered, a company official said on Monday. The unit, part of its Fidelity Management and Research (FMR) that also operates business process outsourcing and research back-office in India, was put on sale last year by the world's largest mutual fund manager. "I can confirm that after an intense review and thorough evaluation, it was decided that we will maintain the FMR India IT organisation at this time," Garima V. Ma, head of corporate communication at Fidelity Investments Indian unit, said. The decision was taken last week, she said in an email to Reuters. FMR has about 5,000 staff in India, including more than 2,000 in the technology unit in the southern cities of Bangalore and Chennai.

heavier balls than in the last few tournaments I've played. "I just couldn't go up and hit the serve with the same velocity as the first two sets. I thought I served pretty good in the first couple sets." Sharapova, who lost to fellow Russian Alla Kudryavtseva in the second round a year ago, is determined to complete her rehabilitation and return to make another tilt at the title. "This is not an overnight process," she added. "It's gonna take time, as much time as it needs to get everything together." As much time as it needs, I'm ready for it." Dulko, who won just three games in two previous matches against Sharapova, beat Martina Navratilova to reach the third round at Wimbledon five years ago but had today's victory as the best of her career. "It was my first time on Centre Court in the most important tournament in the world," she said. "And to beat Maria, who is a great player and a past champion, this is the best."
